The Irish Shows Association

About The Association

The Irish Shows Association (ISA) is the official recognised body representing Irish Agricultural Shows on the island of Ireland. The ISA is a collective representative organisation which currently has more than 130 member shows, which run throughout the Summer and into the Autumn each year. Country shows are an important showcase for the Irish agri-food and bloodstock industries and an ideal platform for the myriad of artisan food producers in this country to display their products and services. Complementing the benefits to the rural economy, agricultural shows are a community event, boosting social capital and wellbeing with local clubs, community groups and schools involved. Agricultural shows provide a breadth of entertainment for local rural communities and most of the agricultural shows are administrated and operated on a voluntary basis, adopting the Irish tradition of the Meitheal model.

The Irish Shows Association Ltd. evolved from a Federation of Show Societies initially formed in 1931. Membership of the Association is open to all recognised Agricultural Show Societies throughout the island of Ireland.

The Irish Shows Association is governed by a voluntary board, consisting of one member for each five member shows. This committee meets on a regular basis and its function is to best ensure that the quality and standards of the Agricultural Shows and related organisations are at the highest optimal levels.

The Aims and Objectives of the organisation are:

- To promote and assist in the development of Agricultural Shows
- To act as a negotiating instrument between members and outside bodies
- To liaise with Government Departments and Agencies in matters affecting members and show exhibitors.
- To organise and oversee annual All Ireland Championships for horses, ponies, cattle, sheep, dogs, horticulture, and home industries.
- To publish an annual show Guidebook and Judges Lis
- To provide a group insurance scheme for member
- To provide a national secretariat and head office for receiving and processing material relevant to members and their interests
- To operate in accordance with the objects for which the company is established, as outlined in the company constitution

The ISA has a permanent head office, which is staffed by The National Secretary and other administrative staff as appointed by the board to carry out the affairs of the association. The office is supported by a board and regional volunteers.

 - Must not be a fair or festival or use those words in its name, including on publicity materials, websites, social media, signage and correspondence

Every effort will be made to mediate between the shows. The final decision on the ratification of the dates lies with the board of the ISA. Criteria to assess the level of clash include close proximity geographically (within 100km), similar programme of classes, similar list of exhibitors. Supporting documentation will be required to substantiate any objection.
4. New shows should only be admitted to membership on a date given by the ISA.
